Kentucky Should Help.

There is a movement on foot to erect a monument in New York to the memory of Steven C. Foster, the song writer. Foster wrote more songs which met with success than any other American. A list of them brings to mind almost all the songs that have been sung by the generation that has just gone off the stage though a few of them hold on to the present. Old Black Joe is still heard and appreciated. "Swanee River" is a favorite of those who love the plantation ballad, and "Massa's in the Cold, Cold Ground" will have a permanent place in African melody. While these are enduring as musical productions, go their author, who has given pleasure to so many millions should have a more enduring monument. His memory appeals to Kentuckians more than to any other people, where does any Kentuckian hear "My Old Kentucky Home," even at home, without being thrilled with delight? and if he should hear it when far away his emotions are often overpowering.

Foster wrote the one distinctive song of Kentucky, and Kentucky should join other states in showing their appreciation of his genius.

DeWitt is the Name

When you go to buy Witch Hazel Salve look for the name DeWitt on every box. The pure unadulterated Witch Hazel is used in making DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, which is the best salve in the world for cuts, burns, bruises, boils, eczema and piles. The popularity of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, due to its many cures has caused numerous worthless counterfeits to be placed on the market. The genuine bears the name of E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago. Sold by E. C. Wines.

Hot Shot.

If you give some fellows a talent wrapped in a napkin to start with in business, they would swap the talent for a gold brick and lose the napkin; and there are others that you could start out with just a napkin, who would set up with it in the dry goods business in a small way and then coax the other fellow's talent into it. Pay day is always a month off to the spendthrift, and he is never able to realize more than sixty cents on any dollar that comes to him. But a dollar is worth 100 cents to any good business man, and he never spends the dollar. I always lay it down as a safe proposition that the fellow who has to break open the baby's bank for car fare toward the last of the week isn't going to be any Russell Sage when it comes to trading with the old man's money.

When I was a young fellow and out of a place I always made it a rule to take the first job that offered, and to use it for bait. You can catch a minnow with a worm, and a bass will take your minnow. A good fat bass will tempt an otter, and then you've got something worth skinning. Adam invented all the different ways in which a man can make a fool of himself and the college, yet at the end of them is a frill that doesn't change essentials. There are times when it is safest to be lonesome. Use a little common sense, caution and conscience. You can stock a store with these three commodities, when you get enough of them. But you've got to begin getting them young. They ain't catching after you toughen up a bit. Seeing the world is like charity—it covers a multitude of sins, and like charity, it ought to begin at home. The only animal that the Bible calls patient is an ass, and that has been good doctrine and good natural history. You must learn not to overwork a dollar any more than you would a horse. Three per cent is a small load for it to draw; six a safe one; when it pulls in ten for you it's working out west and you've got to watch to see that it doesn't balk; when it makes twenty you own a blame good one or a mighty foolish one, and you want to make dead sure which, but if it draws a hundred it's playing races or something just as hard on horses and dollars, and the first thing you know you won't have a carcass even to haul to the glue factory.—Exchange.

Cincinnati Fall Festival.

Novelty in the arrangement of exhibition features, is eagerly sought by promoters of Industrial Expositions. The Fall Festival Association of Cincinnati, claims to have solved the problem of combining usefulness and beauty, for display purposes, in the Hall of all Nations for the September Festival. The floor of the great Music Hall will be arranged in series of booths, each representing some nation of the world, England, France, Spain, Germany, Russia, Ireland, America, etc. with decorations, architecture, costumes, and so far as may be exhibits showing the typical products and industries of the country represented. The merchants and business men of Cincinnati have not been slow to appreciate the decorative advantages of the Hall of all Nations, for representing their goods and importations under the most favorable conditions. One important house will display silks, laces and feminine trifles, under the French Tricolor; another, cotton duck, prints and drillings under the Stars and Stripes. The Brazilian flag will wave over a booth wherein the entire process of gathering, drying and roasting coffee from the berry will be carried on. The Russian booth will exhibit costly furs; "the cup that cheers yet not inebriates," will be brewed under the claws of the yellow dragon, guardian of the Celestial Empire. Memories of the German father land of Erin, will be revived by handsomely decorated booths, maintained by patriotic societies, of those countries, whose citizens have found a new home under the gracious shadow of the American eagle. The attendants of all the displays in the Hall of all Nations, will wear the costume of the country to whose booth they are attached, thus maintaining a picturesque ensemble.

Forty Acres and a Cabin

If Robert G. Ingersoll had been less analytical, a little more considerate of the clergy, and more sparing in ridicule, some of the things he said and which are really worth remembering would have given him a place in hearts now estranged. Few men have written with greater pathos or expressed in language more sublime the ideal happiness which may come from right living here and his home life was such as many of his critics and translators would do well to imitate. His heart was near to nature and his hand was not withheld from those in need. A young man who once sought a clerkship in Washington and who had written for an endorsement from Mr. Ingersoll received the following characteristic reply: "Young man, I would rather have forty acres of land with a log cabin on it and the woman I love in the cabin, with a little grassy, winding path leading down to the spring where the water gurgles from the lips of the earth, whistling day and night to the white pebbles a perpetual poem, with holly hocks growing at the corner of the house, and morning glories blooming over the low latched door with lattice work over the window so the sunlight would fall checked on the dimpled babe in the cradle, and birds, like songs with wings hovering in the summer air, than to be the clerk of any government on earth."

✕ The Final Argument ✕

In these weekly talks of the past few months, we have touched on many sides of the clothing question—we have endeavored to be impartial in all our statements—we have sought to give facts, and facts only—neither stretching the truth in our favor, nor distorting conditions of competition.

In the meantime, these "talks" have brought us many new friends—and our methods of business have cemented their patronage. In the newspapers we can only DECLARE our intentions—but in our business relations, we can PROVE our intentions—and as the "proof of the pudding is in the eating," our morning success is shown in the tremendous increase of our business.
